

Handwritten Arabic text on the left page, featuring dense script and several red ink annotations. The text appears to be a medical or scientific treatise, with some sections highlighted in red ink. The handwriting is in a traditional style, likely from the Ottoman or Mughal periods.

Handwritten Arabic text on the right page, continuing the dense script and red ink annotations from the left page. The text is highly detailed and covers a significant portion of the page, with some marginal notes and corrections.