

Handwritten Arabic text in a dense script, likely a philosophical or linguistic treatise, covering both pages of the manuscript. The text is written in a cursive style with some red ink used for emphasis or headings. The right page contains a large, bold heading at the top, possibly a chapter title or section marker. The text is organized into paragraphs with varying indentations and some marginal notes.

