

Handwritten marginalia at the top of the page, written in Arabic script, likely containing a preface or introductory notes.

Main body of handwritten Arabic text in two columns. The script is dense and features several red ink highlights (rubrics) marking specific sections or key terms. The text appears to be a philosophical or scientific treatise, possibly related to meteorology or natural philosophy.

Handwritten marginalia at the bottom of the page, continuing the discourse or providing additional commentary on the main text.

