

Handwritten Arabic text, likely a manuscript or treatise. The text is densely packed and includes several large, decorative headings in red or black ink. The handwriting is a cursive style typical of the Ottoman or Mughal periods. The text is organized into vertical columns, with some sections separated by lines or small diagrams.

Continuation of handwritten Arabic text from the left page, filling the right page. The text is dense and covers most of the page area, with some marginalia or smaller notes interspersed. The overall appearance is that of a well-preserved historical document.