

Handwritten Arabic text in a dense, cursive script, typical of classical Islamic manuscripts. The text is arranged in multiple columns across two pages. The ink is dark, and the paper shows signs of age and wear. The script is highly legible but very compact. There are occasional larger, bolder characters that serve as section headers or markers. The overall appearance is that of a well-preserved historical document.