

Handwritten Arabic text in a dense, cursive script, likely a manuscript or a collection of letters. The text is arranged in columns and includes various phrases and words, some of which are highlighted or underlined. The script is highly stylized and characteristic of the Maghrebi or Andalusian dialects. The text is written on aged, yellowed paper with some visible wear and tear.

Copyright © King Fahd University