

Handwritten Arabic text in a cursive script, likely a medical or scientific treatise. The text is densely packed and covers both pages of the open manuscript. The right page contains a large section of text with some red ink used for headings or emphasis. The left page also contains dense text, with some lines appearing to be part of a list or a series of related statements. The script is characteristic of the Ottoman or Mughal periods.

فانت الغضا ملك امر القبح ما سب لا يذروا من كفاة