

The image shows a close-up of an open manuscript. The left page (folio 10v) contains text written in a cursive script, with some lines starting with a large initial letter. The right page (folio 11r) also contains text in the same script, with a metal clasp visible on the right edge. The parchment is aged and discolored, and the text is written in a dark ink.

10

Handwritten text in Voynich script, consisting of two columns of text. The script is a form of shorthand or cipher, using various symbols and characters. The text is written in a dark ink on aged, yellowish paper. The page is numbered '10' in the top right corner. The text is organized into several paragraphs, with some lines starting with larger, more prominent symbols that may indicate the beginning of a new section or chapter. The overall appearance is that of a historical document, possibly a form of early modern cryptography or a completely unknown language.